Kyoto is well known as a former capital of Japan and for more than a thousand years the centre of traditional Japanese culture and is still considered the Heart and Soul of traditional Japan. It is placed around 315 miles southwest of Tokyo and 25 miles east of Osaka.

Kyoto is known as the imperial capital of Japan because the emperor stayed there during the whole period during his ruling period. It is the traditional and cultured city of Japan. It's the cultural and historical heart of the country. It’s the best place in all Japan to experience traditional temples, shrines, gardens, geisha, shops, restaurants and festivals. In short, Kyoto is the most rewarding destination in all of Japan and it should be at the top of any Japan travel itinerary. Indeed, I may be biased, but I’d go so far as to say that Kyoto is the most rewarding single city in all of Asia. The fact is, Kyoto is the most rewarding city in Japan and a place all travellers should visit at least once in their lives.

Nishiki Market, also known as Kyoto's Kitchen, is a 400 year old market that spans five blocks of over 100 shops and restaurants. Japan is world famous for its cherry blossoms, and Kyoto is full of the incredible trees. The springtime Hanami festivals in Maruyama Park are especially breath taking. Kyoto is home to incredible natural sites, like the other worldly Arashiyama Bamboo Grove, which is as famous for its beautifully dense stalks as it is for its creaky, rustling noises. (It was even included on the Ministry of Environment's "100 Soundscapes of Japan."

Every meal is a piece of art in Kyoto, which is famous for Kyo-ryori ("Kyoto cuisine"), which involves eating dozens of small, beautifully plated, seasonal courses while perched on tatami mats. Kyoto is famous for its tofu, its sublime kaiseki cuisine and its Buddhist vegetarian fare. It’s also a great place to sample all the main classics of Japanese cuisine. Of course, Kyoto is also a great place to work your way right through the whole Japanese gastronomy including sushi, tempura, soba, udon, ramen, unagi and okonomiyaki.

We warmly welcome you to the traditional, cultural and the beautiful city Kyoto for our upcoming World Congress on Psychiatry and Psychology during May 25-26, 2020 and have a pleasant stay with us.
