Kyoto is the ancient capital of Japan and for more than a thousand years, the heart of conventional Japanese culture is still centered on the heart and soul of customary Japan. It is 50 km southwest of Tokyo and 40 km east of Osaka. Some of Kyoto's remarkable shrines and nurseries have all been considered UNESCO World Heritage sites in 1994. Kyoto is a refined blend of old and new, an urban area where exhibition halls, four-star cafes and dynamic stimulation venues grow near sanctuaries, small shops and quiet neighborhoods.

Kyoto is the dream of most travelers when they imagine Japan. This central point of advancement is reputed to encourage the driving test and the improvement of highly innovative companies. Kyoto has the highest per capita scholastic level in Japan with more than 40 colleges and 50 research associations. The vast majority of Japan's Nobel Prizes have been awarded to specialists from Kyoto University. With a happy social legacy and current goals for the future, the Kyoto Protocol is totally unique in Japan. Kyoto features include the Fushimi Inari Shrine, Gion Geisha Area, Arashiyama Bamboo Woods and the memorable Higashiyama District. Kyoto is also a culinary hub, and for sustenance lovers, it's not best to start with "Kyoto Cuisine", the bright and tumultuous market of Nishiki.
