Bangkok, Thailand's capital city is known for its ornate shrines and vibrant street life. It is an international hub for transport and health care. Historic buildings and temples are scattered throughout the city of Bangkok. The Grand Palace is one of the Thailand's most important tourist sites. Buddhism is considered the country's official religion, and Bangkok is Thailand's Buddhist center, home to many of the country's most famous temples, called wats. Bangkok's famous temples include the Wat Pho and the Wat Traimitr. The Wat Pho temple is home to the 35-meter-long Reclining Buddha, and the Wat Traimitr temple houses the world's largest solid-gold Buddha, weighing five metric tons and standing three meters high. The Royal Ceremonial Barges are another popular attraction. These elaborately decorated, intricately carved longboats take the form of mythical creatures and are only used by the king on special occasions.
