Keynote Forum

09:45-09:55 Introduction

Title: Newly discovered “Invisible physiological lie reflex” which we can detect non-invasively by taking photographs or videos before, during, & after telling a lie. The “Lie Reflex” is characterized by markedly reduced acetylcholine with markedly increased TXB2 & Thymosin $\alpha 1$ and extremely large (-) Bi-Digital O-Ring Test, all of which are appearing in trapezoidal area between the nostrils & upper lip of face. These invisible changes only appear during a person telling a lie & 10~15 seconds after lying
